Short Description

This course examines the history of the people who lived on the margins of the Middle East. Instead of focusing on the history of rulers and elites, we will give a voice to those who have been silenced: women, criminals, slaves, people with mental health issues, and other minorities. We will explore case studies from Turkey, Iran, Egypt, and Israel, among other places, and examine how these people lived, socialized, and made sense of the world around them. Additionally, we will discuss the obstacles that we are expected to encounter when studying marginalized groups. Students will be acquainted with different theoretical and methodological tools, and develop their skills as research historians by reading both primary and secondary materials.

Final grade components

Active Participation (15%).

Two Response Papers (10%).

Midterm Exam (15%).

Final take-home exam (60%).

Attendance

Attendance is mandatory. Students are permitted a maximum of three absences without penalty. Any additional absences will affect the final grade and may result in failure of the course.

Academic Conduct

Plagiarism is taken extremely seriously. Any instance of academic misconduct which includes: submitting someone else's work as your own; failure to accurately cite sources; taking words from another source without using quotation marks; submission of work for which you have previously received credit; working in a group for individual assignments; using unauthorized materials in an exam and sharing your work with other students, will result in failure of the assignment and will likely lead to further disciplinary measures.
